

Hospital Stars

The federal government has graded hospitals on a five-star scale, with more stars indicating higher quality. The star ratings are based on 64 different measures, including death, readmission and infection rates and the consistency of providing routine care properly. Hospitals in Maryland were not rated, and the Medicare also did not award scores to some hospitals with too few patients to properly evaluate or to a number of facilities run by the Department of Veterans Affairs. Medicare plans to update the ratings every three months.
